MOKENA HEALTH BOARD RESCINDS RECENT ORDERS

The smallpox situation at Mokena is well on the way to normal. No new cases having appeared the board of health has rescinded its orders and the churches and other public places have been thrown open to the public.

Last Friday night a special meeting was called by the board of health to consider the petitions of Rev. W. J. Kennitz, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church, and of Rev. William Kreis, pastor of the St. John Evangelical church, that the board lift the ban and allow these churches to have services, seeing that the situation was so much improved. After much deliberation the board finally granted these churches the privilege of a limited service, only one church service being granted, but no Sunday school. No services were held, however, at the St. Mary Catholic nor the M. E. churches.

Voss of Joliet, formerly of Mokena being awarded the job, as he was the lowest bidder, his bid for labor and grading being $3,477.12. OLD FOX'S REVENGE

OLD GRANDPA FOX, as he was called by all the young wood animals, had been bothered so much by the youngsters that he was at his wits' end to know how to punish them.

One day he was sitting outside his door dozing in the sun when Billy Squirrel and his brother climbed into the tree over Grandpa Fox and let down on a string a wiggly turtle, which scared old Grandpa so he tumbled out of his chair.

Another day he fell asleep in his chair and when he awoke and picked up his pipe, which had fallen on the ground, what did Tommie Rabbit and the Squirrel boys do but filled the pipe with black pepper, so poor Grandpa Fox almost sneezed his head off.

Another time they stole his spectacles and put in a magnifying glass, so that everything looked so big to him that he was afraid to move.

But the limit of his patience was reached when they tied strings to all the sticks of wood and when Grandpa Fox went out to get his wood in for the night as fast as he picked it up those bad youngsters would tug at the string and down it would fall.

Grandpa Fox could not see real well in the half-light and it took him a long time to find out what was happening, but when he did he snapped off the string from the sticks in a hurry, you may be sure, looking very angry. He knew better than to talk, for that was just what the youngsters wanted, and Grandpa Fox, having been young himself, had not forgotten his youthful tricks.

"I'll fix those youngsters," said Grandpa, as he sat smoking by the fire that night. "I may be getting old, but I think I can scrape up a thought or two that will pay them off in good shape."

For a long time after that Grandpa Fox was very busy every evening, and if the Squirrel brothers and Tommie Rabbit had watched they might have noticed the light burning late in Grandpa's cabin.

He chuckled as he worked, and though it was very delicate work Grandpa felt it would be well worth all the trouble and care he was taking.

A basket of big nuts stood on one side of his chair and from these Grandpa Fox was very carefully taking all the meat, leaving the shells in two pieces, which fitted perfectly together when empty.

These he filled with pepper—red pepper, too—and then glued the shells so nicely that even an expert could not have told they had been opened.

These, of course, were being prepared especially for the Squirrel brothers.

One of the winsome faces on the "movie" screen is that of Eileen Burdette, the charming little actress who has been admired by thousands in some of the large productions.

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

By MILDRED MARSHALL

LUCRETIA

THOUGH Lucretia was the name borne by the notorious daughter of Borgia, it is one of the quaintest and most old-fashioned of names in this country. It is a far cry from ancient Rome to modern New England, but the name has completed the transition with very few changes to mark the successful stages of its evolution.

There are two theories among etymologists in regard to the original source of Lucretia. Some contend that it comes from the Latin word lucrum, meaning "gain," and for that reason Lucretia is said to signify gain. On the other hand, there is much evidence to prove that its real source was in the Latin word for light, lux. Many feminine names have been derived from this root and the same word has supplied surnames without number.

It is believed, therefore, that the noted old gens Lucrētius from which Lucretia is directly descended, was only another of the derivatives of lux.

"Lucra, combining the fleece under the midnight lamp," the famous old Roman tale, inspired Shakespeare to write one of his earliest poems. Despite her notoriety, Lucretia Borgia probably established the name of Lucretia in Italy, and in early modern times it was one of the few classical names to be revived.

France has a Lucrece, which is popular, and England imported Lucretia in the eighteenth century.

Lucretia's talismanic stone is the red-hearted ruby. It has the power to bring her strength of body, an invincible spirit and success in every undertaking. Tuesday is her lucky day, and 6 her lucky number.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. LURIE

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"WHERE AM I AT?"

IT IS not correct to use the word "at" or the word "to" after the word "where," as in the sentences, "Where were you at last Sunday?" and "Where were you going to?" Say, instead, "Where were you last Sunday?" and "Where were you going?" This is one example of many in English in which the speaker or writer uses too many words to express his meaning.

The sentence, "Where am I at?" attracted much attention about 20 years ago when it was used by a speaker in the house of representatives. The member was making a long speech, filled with long sentences. Not much attention was being paid to him, and he "lost his place" while uttering one of his long sentences. So he turned to the speaker and asked: "Mr. Speaker, where am I at?" The reporters took advantage of the opportunity to poke fun at him, and the phrase was repeated and laughed at all over the United States.

NORTH AND SOUTH.

SEEK out the Southland if you will. Where flowers deck your window-sill. And tuneful birds are singing; Where soft as silk the morning breeze Confides its secrets to the trees, And Springtime's bells are ringing.

I still shall hold to Winter's ways, Despite the roughage of her days. When arctic blasts are blowing, The blasts that, though they thrill with strife, Impart new vigor to my life, And keep my soul a-growing.

LAKE OF IMMENSE DEPTH

Atitlan, in Guatemala, is One of the World's Most Remarkable Bodies of Water.

Below lay cities with their public squares and white churches, fields of yellow grain like golden patches of light in the crystal-clear atmosphere of the Guatemala highlands, huge dark masses of forest, and beyond, extending their thousands of spurs and flanks, rose the prodigious Cordilleras. To the left the peaks of Atitlan towered to the heavens, majestic, symmetrical, recalling in their perfect contour the famed Fugiyama of Japan.

It was more than a half day's ride from this point before we came to Godines crest and beheld, 3,000 feet below us, the deep blue waters of Lake Atitlan, and on its opposite shores, rising sheer a mile to a mile and a half above the surface of the lake, seven great volcanoes, of which the two known as Atitlan are the most wonderful. Lake Atitlan, itself a crater lake 27 miles in greatest length and 12 miles wide, is a remarkable body of water. The Rev. Father Garcia of Nahualla, a graduate of the University of Rome, and one who has given enthusiastic study to the meteorology of the region, informed me that official soundings of this lake gave an extreme depth of more than 1,000 feet.

Its surface is 5,000 feet below the level of the sea. Its waters teem with trout with which it has been stocked, and while walking upon its sandy beach near Panajachel we saw great schools of smaller fish and not a few of the larger. Into its shore plunge the volcanic hills, often in precipitous, forested hogbacks, often in steeply sloping wheatfields, or again ending in mile high cliffs of bright red sandstone or perpendicular walls marked by the slate grays and purplish hues of volcanic ash. Such are the walls of Lake Atitlan, often called Lake Panajachel, painted by nature in her most glorious, riotous colors, and rivaling even the famed hues of the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

From the shores of the lake, as we first looked down upon it, arose great clouds of steam, as if the beach were saturated with boiling water. But, in this case, it was merely the afternoon sun beating upon the wet sands, for the waters of Atitlan are cool and crystal clear. Billows of mist, too, arose from the surface of the lake, only to be caught and dissipated by the sudden squalls that come almost vertically from the mountain passes, and always there were rainbows to be seen in the ascending mists. Whether one looked a half mile down upon the mirrored surface of the lake or whether he gazed at the volcanoes towering a mile above and wreathed in their streaming feather bows of shifting vapors, he felt as though great phenomena of nature were being staged for his benefit.—Hamilton M. Wright in Bulletin of the Pan-American Union.

Has Many Famous Pictures.

In the low, old-fashioned colonial home in Cincinnati of Charles P. Taft, brother of the former President, is to be found one of the finest private collections of the old masters in this country. Little known to the public at large, the paintings that Mr. and Mrs. Taft have acquired in the last twenty years are noted in the small circle of the artistic. The collection is built around the Dutch, English and French schools. In some cases the Taft pictures are the finest examples of their authors to be seen in the United States. This is notably true, according to the late Frank Duveneck, of Frans Hals, and two of his portraits to be found there, "The Young Man of Harlem" and "The Young Woman of Harlem." There was no better judge of Hals in America than Duveneck, in the judgment of friends of the noted Cincinnati artist.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Out of the Ordinary.

Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, recently told an amusing story of a hunt in the Canadian wilds, of the wolf packs that howled around the cabin at night, of going forth, a torch in one hand and a revolver in the other, of seeing two bright eyes in the darkness and firing. The next morning it was discovered that he had killed a rabbit.

Mr. Jussierand, the French ambassador and dean of the corps, later spoofed the Britisher a bit on his story.

"It was an excellent story," said the Frenchman. "Quite remarkable in some respects. It was particularly remarkable, it seems to me, because it was a shooting story told by an Englishman and there was no tiger in it."—Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

THREE YEAR OLD WASHED ASHORE

Mrs. Dingman Tells of Adventure of Childhood When Father's Ship Was Wrecked.

RELATES LATER EXPERIENCE

Declares That the Way Tanlac Restored Her Health is More Remarkable Than Anything She Has Ever Had Happen to Her.

"I've had some remarkable experiences in my life, but none more wonderful than the way Tanlac overcame my troubles and made me gain twenty pounds," was the statement of Mrs. Christina K. Dingman, 1216 Alice St., Oakland, Calif. One of the experiences to which Mrs. Dingman refers is well known to her friends. When a child of three years, accompanying her father, a noted sea captain, on an ocean trip, the vessel was wrecked, but she was almost miraculously saved, the small box into which she was put being washed ashore. According to her statement, Mrs. Dingman enjoyed the best of health until three years ago when she began to suffer from a bad form of stomach trouble and later from rheumatism. How she was completely restored to health is best told in her own words:

"Nobody knows how I suffered for the past three years. No matter how carefully I ate I would endure agonies afterwards from smothering and sinking spells. Sometimes they were so severe I would fall to the floor and would have to be carried to bed. I went for days at a time without eating, as I dreaded the misery I knew would follow, no matter what I ate. Then rheumatism set in and my shoulders and arms hurt me so I couldn't comb my hair. My back felt like it was breaking in two.

"I was almost in the depths of despair when I began on Tanlac, but this grand medicine has made me a well and happy woman. I'm not even troubled with constipation now, thanks to the Laxative Tablets, which are far superior to anything of the kind I ever tried. It seems almost too good to be true, but here I am in the best of health and spirits after I had given up hope, and I'll always praise Tanlac for it."

AT THE TABLE

Ill can rule the great that cannot reach the small.—Spenser.

A VOID any little mannerism that indicates extreme fussiness or finicalness of taste. The person who appears to be examining minutely every morsel that he takes on his fork makes one feel that he is suspicious that the food is not entirely what it ought to be. So, too, the person who samples every viand very carefully before beginning in earnest to eat is too finical to be a pleasant table companion.

Large pieces of bread are broken into smaller pieces before being buttered and carried to the mouth.

Cake may be broken and eaten like bread or crackers or it may be eaten with a fork.

Celery, olives, radishes, salted nuts, bon bons, preserved ginger and other trifles are eaten from the fingers, but berries, melons, and grape-fruit must be eaten with a spoon. Bananas are generally eaten with a fork, peaches, apples and pears are peeled, quartered and cut into small pieces and then picked up with the fingers.

Grapes and small plums are eaten from the fingers, and the stones or skins taken into the hand and carried to the plate, never dropped from the lips. Prune seeds are best pressed out with the spoon before the fruit is eaten, and then laid to one side on the plate.

Bones of fowl, game or chops must not be taken in the finger, but green corn may be eaten that way.

Artichokes, source of much grief to the inexperienced diner, if served hot or cold with sauce must be broken apart, leaf by leaf, and the tip dipped in the sauce, and eaten from the fingers. The heart is cut up and eaten with a fork.

Finger bowls are provided merely to moisten the finger tips, not for a general handwashing.

Your host who inquires what portion of poultry or game, raw meat or well done you prefer will thank you for a definite answer. If you really have no preference say so definitely. Do not enumerate various cuts that appeal to you.

THE ADDING MACHINE.

THE Babylonians had the first recorded mechanical aid to addition, a "pebble-board" with small stones which were shifted about. The Chinese abacus, with its beads on wires, is also very ancient. Pascal, in 1641, invented the first adding machine with dials. In 1820 C. X. Thomas brought out the first successful all-round calculating machine.

As to Names.

The late Champ Clark was christened James Beauchamp Clark, but he voluntarily dropped the first name, and later because people would insist on mispronouncing "Beauchamp," he rechristened himself with the name by which he was generally known. His case reminds us of the old darkey's plan. The latter was asked: "What have you named your baby, Rastus?" "Sam Pro Tem Johnson, sah."

"What's the Pro Tem for?" "To show that the name is only temporary, sah. We kinder thought Sam might like to choose his own name when he grew up, so we put de Pro Tem as a warning to de public."—Boston Transcript.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

DEVIL WORSHIP

AN AMERICAN explorer has just returned to civilization after a visit to the interior of Ecuador and the homeland of the Jibaro Indians.

This tribe of head-hunting savages have lived in the same territory since long before Columbus discovered the Americas and have kept wholly free from the influence of civilization.

The most striking evidence of their failure to advance in the centuries which have passed over them is the report of the explorer that the Jibaros do not believe in a God, but that they do worship devils.

It is practically the universal history of the developments of all peoples from the savage state to that of civilization, that the belief in devils precedes that of a belief in God.

Before they conceive or defy a ruler in the realm of good they establish a kingdom of evil and nominate a being supreme in the management of one or all forms of danger and misfortune.

Herbert Spencer in his analysis of human worship bases religion on the Unknown, declaring that the savage first worships those powers which he does not understand.

It is the savage's inability, because of his savagery, to trace cause from effect that leads him to assign to totally unrelated things the cause for what he observes.

And since it is those things which harm or threaten him with harm which most concern him he establishes first his devil causes rather than his God causes.

He hears in the thunder the voice of a devil living in the sky who punishes with the swift lightning and with fire.

He sees a devil in the wild beast that kills his cattle. There is a demon power that helps his enemies of another tribe.

The white man's gun is an invention of some evil spirit and the drought which spoils his crop or the deluge which overflows his lands are evidences to him of the activities of some powerful and unfriendly spirit which he must in some way appease.

In some of the earliest written history of this country, the narrative left by Captain John Smith of Virginia, there is much space devoted to the devil worship of the Indians of that territory and the sacrifice of children to quiet the wrath of the evil ones.

All through tradition and history from Set, the demon of death and evil in the mythology of early Egypt down to the Hopi Indian dances which take place yearly in Arizona, there has been a continuous story of devil worship and rites and rituals intended to appease his wrath and gain his friendship.

Each of us, highly civilized as we think we are, gives a tremendous power to evil.

Despite the fact that we read in the Bible, and generally think we believe it, that the God of our civilized ideas is omnipotent—all powerful—we immediately deny that fact by giving evil, which cannot be an attribute of God, equal or greater power.

Practically everybody, unless we except Christian Science believers, think that sickness is much more powerful than health and that death is certain to triumph over life.

We can only establish the rule of evil by suppressing the rule of good. Darkness is in itself nothing; it is only the absence of light.

"Silence is only the absence of sound.

Death is only a local ceasing of the phenomena of life.

The way to get rid of darkness is to let in the light.

The way to get rid of evil is to let in and encourage good.

Perhaps we should not blame the poor savage in Ecuador for failing to believe in God and having a liberal supply of devils. He has not yet been able to think out the truth.

But, we who are wiser and, we hope, better for that wisdom, should see to it that as little as possible of "devil worship" creeps into our existences and influences our lives.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"TINKER'S DAM."

RELYING solely upon the phonetic sound of this expression, it appears to be distinctly profane and a number of writers have fallen into the error of spelling "dam" as if it were the word derived from the same source as "condemn."

To say that a person or a thing is "not worth a tinker's dam" is, however, not related in any manner to profanity, but gets its meaning from the fact that a tinker's dam was a wall of dough or soft clay raised around a spot which a plumber, in repairing, desired to flood with solder. The material of which this dam was made could be used only once and was then thrown away as utterly worthless. Meanwhile, it had served the purpose of stopping or damming up the molten metal. The colloquial simile is, therefore, derived from this short period of usefulness and not from any widespread use of the word "dam" on the part of tinkers or plumbers. (Copyright.)

TEST EGGS AT LEAST TWICE

Make Inspection on Seventh and Fourteenth Days for Those Infertile or With Dead Germs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

It is of little profit for a hen to sit patiently for 21 days if the eggs over which she fluffs her feathers are infertile or if the germs in them have died. Neither does it pay to run an incubator for three weeks, with its attendant care and expense, if the eggs in it are not fertile.

All poultry owners who raise chicks should be thoroughly familiar with the method of testing eggs. An egg, whether it is fertile or not, has a small grayish spot, known as the germinal spot, on the surface of the yolk. As soon as a fertile egg is placed under a hen or in an incubator the development of the germ begins. All eggs should be tested at least twice during the incubation period, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. This is done preferably on the seventh and fourteenth days. The infertile eggs, and

SCHOOL DAYS

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

PART TIME WORK

THERE are two reasons why part-time work is sought. The first is that the woman who has her own home to run cannot be away all day without serious consequences, particularly if she is a mother as well as a wife. Yet it is sometimes necessary to have the woman add something to the direct income. Part time work is the solution.

The second reason is that the regular job does not pay enough. This is often the case with teachers and librarians and other professional workers whose salaries are small, while the calls upon them are great. They do not want to give up the special professional labor in which they are regularly engaged, yet they must have more money.

Summer jobs are various, from accepting positions as governess to children, or waiting at summer hotels, to filling in at offices where vacations are cutting down the regular force. A stenographic summer job can often be secured in an office for two weeks or a month, and then another one, and so on until the vacation season closes. Some women are successful in taking parties of young girls or older women on tourist excursions, charging a good price for services of this sort.

Lecturing is another good part-time job. The lectures are planned for women's clubs and political associations. To succeed here you must be a good speaker, and have from four to six lively papers to read on any given subject, or on two or three allied subjects. It is best to specialize.

Teaching craft work is an excellent part-time occupation, and so are the various housekeeping jobs that are opening for the trained woman who wishes to give only half a day to such work. Two women I know divide between them the work of an office, as well as the salary. One goes for the morning, the other for the afternoon, and this has worked well.

The woman looking for part-time work is more likely to get it today than in any period before. It is a solution for both employer and employees that is certain to become more and more popular.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

by Nellie Maxwell

"Man may be the head of the family, but far better than that, woman is the heart of it."

MEALS FOR THE DAY.

COMBINATIONS are not always good in leftovers, unless great care is used in blending them. The following, though unusual, proved very good. A cupful or two of well broiled with noodles was the basis of this dish. A baking dish was well greased with the fat from a piece of steak, also a small bit of cold steak was minced and put into the dish, with some of the cooked meat, also minced, then the noodles and the jelly soup, a dish of creamed onions (which were also leftovers) were chopped and added, and the whole covered with leftover mashed potato, moistened with milk. Bake until the potato is slightly brown and serve from the dish. Add such seasonings as are needed when arranging the food in the pan.

Liver With Onion Sauce.

Parboil sliced calf's liver until well heated, turning in the boiling water; drain and dip in flour well seasoned, and fry in hot bacon fat until well cooked. Fry a cupful of chopped onions in the remaining fat, until a slight brown; add a tablespoonful of vinegar and pour over the liver.

Peanut Butter Loaf.

Pour three cupfuls of cold water over one-half cupful of rice and stir with a fork until the boiling point is reached; let boil one minute, drain on a sieve, rinsing with cold water; return the rice to the fire with two cupfuls of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt; cover and cook until the rice is tender. Add a cupful of peanut butter, half a teaspoonful of paprika, an egg beaten light, and one-half cupful of milk. Mix all together well and shape in a mold on a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with half a cupful of cracker crumbs mixed with two tablespoonfuls of fat. Bake one-half hour; serve hot with tomato sauce. One may use a mixture of pecans, walnuts and almonds ground.

Potato Spring Salad.

Cook the potatoes with their skins on; cool and peel, then cut in dice; add a handful of minced chives or a finely minced onion. Now add finely minced, tender uncooked dandelion greens. Mix all together and pour over hot bacon fat with the bacon minced in it; stir and mix well, then add a little boiling hot vinegar, salt and pepper and serve hot.

THE TRIALS OF A HOUSEWIFE

How They Have Been Endured and How Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Experience of a Providence Woman

Providence, R. I.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a female trouble and backache. It began just after my baby was born, and I did the best I could about getting my work done, but I had awful bearing-down pains so I could not stand on my feet. I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the good it was doing other women, and I have got dandy results from it and will always recommend it. You can use these facts as a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HERBERT L. CASSEN, 18 Meni Court, Providence, R. I.

Ohio woman for three years could hardly keep about and do her housework she was so ill. Made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fayette, O.—"For about three years I was very nervous and had backache, sideache, dragging-down pains, could not sleep at night, and had no appetite. At times I could hardly do my housework. I got medicine from the doctor but it did not help me. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and took it with good results, and now able to do my housework. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. CHESTER A. BALL, R. 15, Fayette, Ohio.

An Illinois woman relates her experience: Bloomington, Ill.—"I was never very strong and female trouble kept me so weak I had no interest in my housework. I had such a backache I could not cook a meal or sweep a room without raging with pain. Rubbing my back with alcohol sometimes eased the pain for a few hours, but did not stop it. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and six bottles of it have made me as strong and healthy as any woman; and I give my thanks to it for my health."—Mrs. J. A. McQUITTY, 610 W. Walnut St., Bloomington, Ill.

The conditions described by Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Ball, and Mrs. McQuitty will appeal to many women who struggle on with their daily tasks in just such conditions—in fact, it is said that the tragedy in the lives of some women is almost beyond belief. Day in and day out they slave in their homes for their families—and beside the daily routine of housework, often make clothes for themselves and for their children, or work in their gardens, all the while suffering from those awful bearing-down pains, backache, headaches, nervousness, the blues, and troubles which sap the very foundation of life until there comes a time when nature gives out and an operation seems inevitable. If such women would only profit by the experience of these three women, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the natural restorative for such conditions it may save them years of suffering and unhappiness.

There is hardly a neighborhood in any town or hamlet in the United States wherein some woman does not reside who has been restored to health by this famous medicine. Therefore ask your neighbor, and you will find in a great many cases that at some time or other she, too, has been benefited by taking it, and will recommend it to you. For more than forty years this old-fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring suffering women to health and strength.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

The Pullman being very crowded, the Elsie had to sleep in an upper berth. It was a wonderful adventure and it filled her with great glee. Her mother did not succeed in getting her quiet until it was time for her to say her prayers, but she was a well-brought-up little girl and knew that prayers must always be said earnestly. She knelt in her upper berth and began in a serious little voice: "Now I lay me up to sleep."

The Candle Snuffers Were Snuffed.
It is just about 300 years ago that candle snuffers used to be used, for at that time there was a great advance in the manufacture of the wicks which enabled the latter to burn more satisfactorily, and after that there was no use for the snuffers. The wicks of candles are put through a treatment on various chemicals before they are placed in the interior of the candle. This prevents them from smoking and from burning too rapidly.

Central evidently had been asking for the number, and Margery was explaining vehemently: "Central, I want the number I had Thursday. Don't you understand? The same number."

Forbidding Name.
A little fellow who had been to the museum was asked by his mother if he remembered the names of any of the animals he had seen. "Yes," he replied, "most of the animals were named 'Do not touch.'"—Boston Transcript.

An Adventure Romance

GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

COPYRIGHT THE BOBBE-MERRILL COMPANY

PAMELA THORNTON.

Synopsis.—Robert Hervey Randolph, young New York man-about-town, leaves the home of his sweet-heart, Madge Van Teller, charged because of her refusal of his proposal of marriage. His income, $10,000 a year, which he must surrender if a certain Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton (whom he has seen only as a small girl ten years before) is found, is not considered by the girl of his heart adequate to modern needs. In a "don't care" mood Randolph enters a taxi, unseen by the driver, and is driven to the stage door of a theater. A man he knows, Duke Beamer, induces a girl to enter the cab. Beamer, attempting to follow, is pushed back by Randolph and the cab moves on. His new acquaintance tells Randolph she is a chorus girl, and has lost her position. She is in distress, even hungry, and he takes her to his apartment.

The girl considered gravely for a moment; then her face broke into a rippling smile that swept up and settled in her eyes. She reached for a cushion, put it at her back, tucked one foot under herself, and waved the other in the same fashion as had Miss Van Teller earlier in the evening.

"Now talk," she said.

"Do you like me?" asked Mr. Randolph.

She nodded her head.

"You're not afraid to be here?"

She shook her head.

"Have you ever been in a man's room before?"

She looked him straight in the eyes and made no other sign.

It was Mr. Randolph's turn to flush.

"Then," he said, "if you like me and if you're not afraid, please begin at the start and tell me all about it."

The girl's eyes fell and sought the fire. Her face slowly paled to the shade of her somber thoughts. She was no longer pretty; she was beautiful, with a revealing transparency that made her seem unfleshed, a disembodied spirit of sincerity and truth, indubitably pure.

"I had a nurse once," she said, in a low voice, "and a wire-haired terrier, a show-dog and a darling. His name was Sport." She raised solemn eyes to Randolph's face as though measuring his powers of understanding. "My nurse died and then, one day, I had to sell Sport; I wasn't old enough to sell myself."

She stopped speaking with an unmistakable finality. Randolph was overwhelmed by the flood of information that this slip of a girl had packed into two-score words. A life-story in four lines and a revelation of the heart thrown in for good measure! Over and above that, he had to reckon with the confirmation of a suspicion which had been slowly establishing itself in his mind that he had met her before, that not for the first time this night had those soft lips, curved for merry words, cried, "My, what a bump!" within his hearing.

So many considerations pressed to his immediate attention that he awoke to the actual present too late to stem the tide of tears that suddenly rose to the girl's eyes.

"Oh," she sobbed, "what is to become of me? I was so happy here, if you hadn't made me think!"

If anything has been said in the course of these pages to give the impression that Mr. Randolph was modeled after Joseph or heven out of ice or packed with probity to the exclusion of red blood, forget it. At the sight of those tears, he said the length of the couch to first base, fielded the girl in his arms, switched her round so that she lay across his knees, drew her face against his shoulder, and rocked her gently.

"You poor kiddie," he said softly, "what a devil of a time you've had! But believe me when I tell you it's all over. This is the night that starts your old happy sun into the blue sky again. Don't worry."

She stopped crying and looked up into the honest face so close to her own, puzzling as to how just those words could have come from it; but the world had taught her a hard lesson in varying standards. She drew a long quivering sigh.

"If you could only wait until I love you, body and soul," she breathed.

"What on earth do you mean?" asked Mr. Randolph.

"Why, then it wouldn't be so bad—so ugly."

"I don't get you," remarked Robert Hervey.

"A man told me just a little while ago that he was making a catalogue of reasons why women give themselves," she continued. "He had eleven already, and yet he was one of the nicest men I've met. He talked to me as though he were showing me a way that I must travel alone."

"Really?" said Mr. Randolph, stifling perceptibly.

"The lowest reason of all was for cold cash," she went on, as though he had not spoken. "Then came the glitter of precious stones, and, after that, silk underwear."

"Silk underwear!" exclaimed Mr. Randolph, mystified and interested in spite of himself.

"Of course you couldn't understand that," she said, "not unless you had seen some poor girl bury her face in crepe de chine and lace, tremble to try them on, and then sob because she had to wear clothes over them."

"Look here," said Mr. Randolph, shuddering at the pith of it: "we'll pass on to the next, if you don't mind."

"Curiosity comes next," resumed the girl obediently. "A woman is weak until she knows everything. Then comes a funny one that you won't understand at all. It's called 'Because.'"

"Because he had on a coat that reminded her of an old coat that a man she had loved used to wear."

"My dear girl—" protested Mr. Randolph.

"I said they weren't interesting," she reminded him dispassionately. Her eyes widened. "And now," she continued, "we go up and up—spite that stabs its own heart; the lonely soul; consuming fire, and last and greatest reason of all, just love." Her eyes glowed to some distant focus. "If all myself, my honor, my past, and my future dissolve to the single drop of a present moment in the crystal cup of love, then let me give myself to a lover's lips for, once drained, nothing will be left upon which to hang the badge of shame—nothing remain in all the world but the spirit and—the sacrifice."

"Girl," said Mr. Randolph, crushing her to him as though he snatched her back from just beyond his clasp, "where is your mind wandering? What have you been thinking? That I was asking you to—to give yourself to me?"

Her eyes came suddenly to his face. "Yes," she said; "I thought that."

He stared at her for a long, silent moment, his lips wavering nervously between pity and severity. A flush swept over her face, and into her eyes crept a look of fear. "You don't want me?" she whispered; then, as he did not speak: "Kiss me. I wish you to kiss me."

There was something in her insistence that clutched at his heart and bent him forward. He drew her head up slowly to meet his lips and kissed her as lightly, as impersonally as brother ever saluted sister, but far more fearfully. Immediately her body went limp in his arms, turned to a dead weight of uninspired flesh.

"It is true," she murmured, desperately. "You don't really want me and I can never love you now."

Randolph awoke to that still cry. He shook her, seized her head in both his hands, and forced her eyes to meet the blaze in his.

"You generous, careless, adorable little fool!" he growled. "Why, you're the most desirable and precious bundle of lovable charm that robber man ever trembled to hold in sacrilegious arms!"

She stared at him amazed.

"Why don't you kiss the way you talk?" she demanded.

"Because there's no reason for your desperate barrier, my dear Imogene Pamela Thornton."

In one little motion she was out of his arms, on her feet, back to the fire, head upthrown.

"How dare you—how dare you call me by that name?" She was transformed; her eyes flashed with such a light as made the blaze in his own a paltry thing. "Do you think she would lie in your arms?" She asked, gulping out the words. "Vivienne Vivienne"—her lips curled in distaste at the name—"ah, yes; poor despairing thing! But I—Pamela Thornton! Oh, who are you? Why did you?" She dropped her face in her hands and sobbed as though her heart had broken.

Randolph did not leap to comfort her this time; he did not even watch her. With his eyes on the edges of fire that peeped from between and round her ankles, he began to talk.

"I knew you; I knew Sport; I knew Maggie. Just once I met you all, and I've never forgotten. I couldn't." He smiled crookedly. "You and I sat down so hard together and you cried out, 'My, what a bump!' and laughed and laughed—just like tonight, back there at the stage-door of the Crocodile."

Pamela stopped crying.

"So you were that awfully nice boy," she said, disclosing tear-stained cheeks and looking him over as though she were inventorying a long list of points of deterioration.

Robert Hervey Randolph, six feet tall, freckled-nosed, open-faced, blue-eyed and broad-shouldered, looked up at her almost appealingly as if his whole sum and substance were crying out to be appraised at face value but no less.

"That's me," he said rapidly. "My name is Robert Hervey Randolph. Some people call me 'Bob,' some 'Herv,' and the sly ones say 'Randy.'"

"And I shall call you 'Mr. Randolph,'" said Miss Thornton bravely, and then broke into: "After—after I've thanked you again and—again from my heart. I'm going now."

"That's a wrong guess!" said Robert, smiling happily—he didn't know exactly why. "I'm the one that's going, after you promise me that you'll stay here until ten o'clock tomorrow. But before we come to that, please don't thank me ever. It's selfish, but I'd simply love to have you remember me as Bob or Herv or, at the very worst, Randy. Won't you?"

She looked this way and that before she let her face ripple to its wondrous smile.

"I'll go as far as Randy," she conceded mischievously; then she smiled went and the shadow came. "But I really can't stay here, you know."

Mr. Randolph leaped to his feet, reached her in a single stride and caught her by both wrists. "Look at me!" he said. "If you won't promise to stay here without a break till ten o'clock tomorrow and thereafter at your pleasure, I'll stay myself and hold you. Now, do you or don't you? One—two—"

"I do."

"Do what?" inquired Robert.

"I promise."

"Make yourself absolutely at home, then," he said, as he dropped her hands and turned toward the door.

"I feel like Christmas eve," said Miss Thornton meekly. "Won't you please tell me what's going to happen?"

"You've guessed it—Christmas," he answered enigmatically, tossed the latch-key on the table, and left her.

She can be excused for spying upon him from the curtained window. She saw him awake the cabman, and then watched the pantomime of a long colloquy.

"Oh!" she moaned. "No wonder! The awful, awful price of those horrid clock things! Why did I let him tell it to wait?"

Presently she was amazed to see both the driver and Mr. Randolph disappear into the dark recesses of the cab and close after them its door. For twenty breathless minutes she watched, tormented by the thought that they had retired to have it out where they wouldn't be disturbed by the police. But at last they issued—both of them. Mr. Randolph proceeded to crank the car and then, walking rather strangely, went off, headed west; the driver mounted his box, threw in the clutch, and scurried to the east as though he were off to meet the morning.

"Strange doings!" thought Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton, as she turned from the window to start on a privately conducted voyage of discovery.

Strange doings, indeed, and stranger still could Imogene Pamela have heard as well as seen. This is what really happened: Mr. Randolph awoke the cabman gently but thoroughly; then he said:

"Look here: I want to buy your wagon."

"Gowan, boss; wot d'yer take me for? Here I been freezin' most to det' fer two mortal hours an' a gent like you starts right in kickin' on the clock without even readin' it."

"Shucks!" said Mr. Randolph.

"What's biting you? Never mind the meter-reading; here's twenty for you to forget that. Now tell me: Who owns your buzz-wagon? You?"

"Now; the Village Cab company," replied the saturnine cabman as he stuffed the twenty-dollar bill into his trousers pocket.

"Well," said Mr. Randolph, "you and I are about the same build and I've got a proposition for you. Change clothes, hand me over your cab, and take two hundred dollars to see yourself to another job."

The driver showed no surprise; he contemplated the offer with half-closed eyes and dubiously working lips.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

MELLY'S BIRTHDAY.

"Listen," said the Myrtle bed, "there she comes. Be quite still and don't let her know."

"Don't you suppose she knows?" asked the Pink Phlox.

"Perhaps she guesses, but still we mustn't say a word," said the Myrtle.

And then a little girl named Melly walked by and on down the garden.

"You see," the Myrtle continued, "it is fun to make-believe everything is going to be a great surprise."

Melly probably has a very good idea that she will have a birthday cake and a wreath, and flowers about the table, but still we like to all whisper and have secrets and pretend everything will be a great surprise, and Melly likes it, too, that way.

"I heard Melly's mother talking about it the other day," the Myrtle said. "Melly calls her mother 'Dolly,' you know. For a long time I thought it was her name, but it seems it isn't. It is a pet name Melly has for her mother because her mother is so small and dainty and pretty, like a lovely dolly, you see."

"I see," said Pink Phlox, nodding its lovely head.

"Melly's mother said that she had never missed a year in coming to this Myrtle bed for us so she could make a wreath for Melly's cake. She picks marigolds, too, and that gives a lot of color to the wreath, for they do look like flowers of gold!"

Then she decorates the birthday table with us and with you, lovely Pink Phlox, and Melly's auntie works hard, too, picking flowers, and decorating everything.

"When the morning of the birthday comes there are flowers around Melly's place at the breakfast table. Then there are flowers around her place at the lunch table, and flowers around her place at the supper table."

"At about eleven o'clock in the morning the birthday table is put on the back porch, decorated with all of us from the garden."

"For years and years they've used my family for the wreath. That is such an honor."

"And we have always come out just in time for her birthday," said the Pink Phlox. "We liked to be called Melly's birthday flowers."

"Oh," said the Myrtle, "there is such excitement. Melly is told to keep out of the way and she is glad to do that, for she likes to have everything seem like an enormous surprise."

"They will ring the bell for the birthday table at a few minutes before eleven tomorrow and then Melly will come along and will follow the procession."

"Procession?" asked the Pink Phlox.

"Certainly," said the Myrtle. "They will all form a procession, and the Dolly mother will lead it, ringing a bell, then will follow auntie, and Melly will take hold of her brother's arm and he will show her, with much bowing and smiling, to her place."

"Her chair will be decorated with flowers. You will see, Pink Phlox. You will be there, too."

"Then there will be the cake with the candles, and there will be poems. Oh, yes, everyone will write a poem for Melly, and they will say much the same as they have every year, but that won't make it any less wonderful!"

"All of Melly's family will dress in funny old clothes, and they'll all be wearing lots and lots of smiles. You know there are some people who can't scare up more than one smile? You've seen them, Pink Phlox, with their little tiny smiles, oh, such stinky smiles!"

"But Melly's family have lots of smiles! The smiles will all be there tomorrow."

"And there will be speeches, and presents, and the sponge cake, upon which the candles will be standing will be so proud, that it will get fine and light as a sponge cake should be."

"But oh, while Melly loves her birthday, I don't believe she loves it much more than the flowers and myrtle of the garden. They simply love adding their beauty and sweetness in honor of Melly. Hush! We're off for the wreath now!"

GOOD THINGS.

The breakfast being the first meal of the day is often the most difficult to serve in the morning with children and business men to get off on time. Really, the breakfast is the most important meal of the day as it strikes the note of the day's harmony or discord. A well-planned meal does away with the hurry of not knowing just what to serve. However simple or elaborate the meal, it is the opening of a new day and no pains should be spared to start everybody out right.

Delicate, aged persons or semi-invalids and, often, people in apparent good health suffer from a lack of appetite in the morning. For such, a very light meal should be served: hot milk or coffee, a piece of toast with a cup of chocolate or cocoa and pulled bread or a cracker will be sufficient, or even a glass of hot malted milk with zwieback and marmalade will be quite enough refreshment for those needing a light breakfast. For those who eat very sparingly it is much better to serve them often—five meals a day, if light food, will be much better than three heavier meals.

Whatever beverage is served should be served hot, as such drinks are stimulating and are often very beneficial. The light breakfast of cereal, with top milk or cream, following a fruit, then a substantial dish like eggs, fish or bacon with toast, cakes, gems and a little jam or marmalade with a cookie or doughnut, and a cup of hot coffee will be found a rather substantial and sustaining meal.

At a hearty breakfast meat and potatoes are served; in the country where the day begins early and the workers are out in the open, a heavier meal is required, and chops, liver, bacon, pork and beans, kidneys, baked and fried potatoes, scrapple or plain fried mush, also two kinds of warm bread, or hot griddle cakes, find a welcome. Gardeners, sportsmen and campers will find this kind of a meal

That part of the telephone service which is the most important to the home is the one that is the most neglected. There are two things in life that a sage must preserve at every sacrifice, the coats of his stomach and the enamel of his teeth. Some evils admit of consolation, but there are no comforts for dyspepsia and the toothache.—Bulwer.

HOT CAKES FOR COOL DAYS.

As hot cakes of all kinds are great favorites we never tire of them. The following may afford something new:

Crumb Griddle Cakes With Dates.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of fine bread crumbs, one and one-half cupfuls of hot milk, soak for 15 minutes. Mix and sift one-half cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one tablespoonful of sugar; beat two eggs. To the crumbs add the eggs, dry ingredients and three-fourths of a cupful of stoned and chopped dates, and when well mixed, add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Bake on a hot griddle and serve with maple syrup to which a tablespoonful of melted butter has been added.

Brownie Flapjacks.—Mix one-half cupful of flour with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half cupfuls of whole wheat flour, one-half cupful each of nuts and raisins. Stir in three-fourths cupful of milk, add three tablespoonfuls of molasses and one well-beaten egg. Mix well and bake on a hot griddle.

Enchiladas.—Cook one pound of pork from the shoulder until tender. In water to cover. Remove the meat from the bones and chop. Take the broth in which the meat was cooked and stir in cornmeal to make a mush. Season with salt and pepper and a little sage, stir in the chopped meat and pour into a mold. Slice and fry as any fried mush.

Spanish Pancakes.—Take one cupful of warm cooked rice, two egg yolks beaten light, mix and add one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of curry powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of chopped chicken livers, one teaspoonful of grated onion, one tablespoonful of melted butter and two stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Mix and bake on a hot griddle. Calf's liver may be substituted for the chicken and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of curry used instead of one, if curry is not especially well liked.

Sassafras buds are undeveloped leaf-buds and picked and dried are sold as gumbo file. The flavor is not at all like the root or bark, but has a dainty flavor of its own with the mucilaginous quality which gives the indispensible touch, according to the Creole cooks, who have made gumbo famous by their methods of cooking okra.

OLD INDIAN RACE.

"Red Paint Problem" Is Interesting Archeologists.

Explorations in the State of Maine Have So Far Been Inconclusive, But Will Go On.

Since the recent donation to the state of Maine of a number of boxes of relics, 3,500 pieces, there has been a renewed interest in the explorations going on in Maine in connection with the so-called Red Paint Indians. Several of the earlier explorations were around the town of Orland in Hancock county. Ernest O. Sugden, the town clerk, has long been interested in Indian exploration work, and has himself developed into quite an authority on the subject.

Mr. Sugden's curiosity in Indian explorations was first aroused in 1892, when C. C. Willoughby of the Peabody museum, Harvard university, explored the mound at Lake Alamoosook in Orland. Mr. Sugden, a watch repairer by occupation, became a much interested onlooker. Prof. Warren K. Moorehead of the department of archaeology of Phillips-Andover academy also began explorations in Orland.

So interested did Mr. Sugden become in Indian exploration work that during the past eight years he has assisted in carrying on explorations in nine different states. Prof. Moorehead says there is in Maine what the scientists call the "Red Paint Problem," so-called because of the quantities of red ochre found in the graves in the cemeteries of these people.

"The problem relates to a people of very great antiquity, which were quite different from Algonquin or other tribes known in early Maine history. The graves are so old that no bones remain. The people seem related to the earliest Esquimaux. Only by the most careful hand-trowel work and minute observation during exploration of cemeteries or sites occupied by these people can we learn concerning their culture and antiquity.

"In these graves are found peculiar gouges, hatchet blades, flint spears, plummet, long pendants, fire-stones and iron pyrites, and occasionally chipped arrowheads, but the latter are not frequently found."

A. H. Bridges of Waterville, who has long been interested in archaeology, called the attention of Gov. Milliken not long ago to evidences of the former existence of the Red Paint Indians in certain burial grounds in Waterville and Winslow.

"So far as known, the Red Paint Indians were the last culture of Indians in North America," says Mr. Bridges. "They antedated pottery, as none has ever been found in their graves. They were spearmen, not bowmen, as only spearheads have been found in burials. They had no peace-pipes, so knew nothing of tobacco as the Indians did.

"Stones for striking fire are common in graves, sheets of mica either for looking glasses or ornament are often found, gouges and spears and chisels were most common instruments of stone, well made and some ornamented. "They had a printed language of peculiar character as traces on a chisel have been found. More of the language characters will no doubt be discovered as new cemeteries are excavated. No stone axes have been found.

"The most distinct and peculiar trait of these people is the use of red ochre from Mt. Katahdin region in their cemeteries, the stone implements being placed near each body in the ochre. Traces of these people are found along the Penobscot valley, Androscoggin river, and last summer John T. Kellher of Waterville located a cemetery on the Sebasticook river in Winslow."

"After considering the method of burial and the character of implements found in Red Paint graves," says Mr. Kellher, "we can easily arrive at the conclusion that they were of a different stock from the historic Indians found here by the first Europeans, since it is well known that the custom of laying the dead in a shallow grave and covering the body with a layer of ochre, or of red paint, was not practiced by the Algonquin or Penobscot tribe of the Algonquin, who held sway over the Kennebec river regions, nor of any other tribes of Indians in North America."

There have been discovered in Maine 18 of the so-called Red Paint cemeteries and there have been 400 graves examined.

Is Space Endless?
Einstein's theory that space may not be of infinite extent seems to have obtained indorsement by many eminent physicists.

Nevertheless it would not appear that, if this idea be accepted, the cosmos is to be regarded as alarmingly shrunk. For Einstein's own opinion is that a ray of light traveling 186,000 miles a second would require a billion years to make a complete circuit of its outer limits.

"Don't see why it should," replied Johnny. "My eating at meal times never takes away my appetite for eating 'tween meals."—Boston Transcript.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

THE HAPPY SCOUTMASTER

The National council of the Boy Scouts of America, at its eleventh annual meeting, held in New York City a short time ago, adopted a resolution expressing heartfelt appreciation of the loyal and self-sacrificing service of the volunteer workers in the movement, throughout the nation. This is a recognition due from all of us who have sons or who are interested in the welfare of boys, all of us, who understand that what our youth is being taught today, will determine what our America will be tomorrow.

In an article in a recent issue of scouting appears this fine commentary on the happy scoutmaster who "valiantly serves his country in time of peace. Placing duties above rights, service above self, he fares forth to win for his country the heart of youth, the hope of the world.

"The happy scoutmaster perceives that what makes his efforts worth while is not only that through wholesome play he may save a boy from the error of his way, but also that life being real and earnest and practical a boy must learn to labor, and it is the happy scoutmaster who kindles within the heart of youth the fires of ambition—passion to make the most of himself, the will to work, to serve his country and to honor and reverence his God.

"The happy scoutmaster finds the motive power of his own life in the scout oath and law and counts that day lost wherein no good turn is done. Nobly inspired, his boys follow the same vision splendid and like knights of old find the Holy Grail in helping other people at all times. He is, indeed, the happy scoutmaster; when so prepared, he wins the confidence of the boy and offers opportunity for youth to prove how gloriously it will do the right wherever there is such a man to lead.

"Many serve their country valiantly. Some have lived, and given much; others have died, and given all. But who more than the happy scoutmaster for his country's sake lays down his life? Having one life to give to his country, he gives it freely that youth may be served.

"While others concern themselves with seeming weightier matters, the happy scoutmaster lays foundations that make safe the future building of democracy."

An Englishman, recently arrived in the U. S. A., at New York city, asked a smart looking newsboy to show him about the city.

When they came to the American Surety company building, the Englishman asked: "Pray, my lad, how long did it take to build that building?" "About two years," the boy replied. "My, that was quite long, we could build it in a year." Next they came to the National Park bank building. "How long did it take to build that building?" the Englishman asked. "About a year," was the answer. "That was a long time. We English would have built it in six months." Then they came to the Woolworth building. "And how long were you building this wonderful structure?" "I don't know sir," replied the boy. "It wasn't there last night."—Boys' Life.

A NEW STAR.

Astronomers have discovered a new star which is arousing unusual interest. It is known as the Nova Sagittarii star or "nova." Stars of this kind burst suddenly into flame and then fade away until they are invisible to the eye. Sometimes they can still be seen by powerful telescopes, while again they disappear entirely. Astronomers have many theories to account for the sudden disappearance of such stars, but they still remain a mystery. —Boys' Life.

LACKING IN WILLIE'S MAKEUP

Really Not Small Boy's Fault That He Was Unable to Comply With Mother's Advice.

Senator McCumber, chairman of the senate finance committee, was discussing these advantages of terrific profits on the part of dollar-a-year patriots.

"We must not be too hard on these misguided men," he said with a wink. "They occupied positions of great temptation, you know. It is easier to sermonize about temptation than to resist it.

"These weak, culpable and yet well-meaning men remind me of little Willie. "Little Willie stole a quarter one day out of his mother's pocketbook. His mother detected the theft and trounced him severely. Then she preached him a long sermon concluding with:

"It's all a matter of resisting temptation. Always, always turn a deaf ear to temptation, son."

"Little Willie stopped his sobbing long enough to say: "But, mom, I ain't got no deaf ear."

Children Cry For

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

TENOR "CARRIED THE TUNE"

Distribution of Voices in the Singing of Old Ecclesiastical Songs, and in Opera.

In the old ecclesiastical songs the voice which sang the chant melody, and around which other parts grouped themselves was called the "tenor." This task had to be entrusted to the person with the highest or loudest voice. The word is derived from the Latin tenore (I hold) and meant nothing more than that the tenor "carried the tune."

Voices were not formerly distributed as at present. W. J. Henderson in his "Early History of Singing" says:

"We should undoubtedly be amazed to find Julius Caesar singing soprano or Achilles contralto, but the opera gods of the Seventeenth century would have been much astonished if either of them had been a baritone or a bass. At most they could have been tenors, but neither in that case would have been the principal personages in the drama. He would surely have been a soprano."

Cigar Ash Causes Smash-Ups.

Cigar ashes are sometimes the cause of automobile accidents and frequently the cause of confusion in traffic. The motorist who unconsciously sticks his arm out of the side of the car to knock off the ashes confuses the driver following him, who may think it is a signal to turn.

"I have seen this happen a good many times on the road," said a driver. "You naturally think he plans to turn at the next corner. Misinterpretation of such signals has caused many accidents."—New York Sun.

ORLAND DEFEATS WORTH.

The Orland school baseball team played Worth school team recently and defeated them with a score of 17 to 6 in the school ball league. From present indications it would appear that Orland is likely to win the league banner.

The Orland Park club held a meeting in the club room in the bank building Friday night.

Hoary Old Asia.

The history of Asia goes back very far. One of the earliest events recorded and regarded as authentic is the founding of the temple of Bel at Nippur, 6000 B. C. The Accadian-Sumerian kingdoms are placed at the head of the ruling powers. When they commenced is not clear but they continued to the year 2239 B. C.

Why They Stop Counting.

The best years of one's life are from eighteen to twenty-four, says a writer; so we really can't blame our girls for lingering between those years as long as possible.—Boston Transcript.

Censure Comes to All.

It is folly for an eminent person to think of escaping censure, and a weakness to be affected by it. All the illustrious persons of antiquity, and indeed of every age, have passed through this fiery persecution. There is no defense against reproach but obscurity; it is a kind of concomitant to greatness, as satire and invectives were an essential part of a Roman triumph.—Addison.

Differing Ideas About Robins.

Some people in Germany believe that if a robin nests under your eaves, your house will be protected against fire; while others consider it a bad omen, foretelling a conflagration.

Different.

In England, while a husband can obtain a judicial separation from his wife for habitual drunkenness, the same privilege is not extended to wives of men who are addicted to drink.

Artificial Pearls.

The familiar artificial pearls of commerce are globules of glass lined with a substance derived from the scales of a fish called the bleak. It is to this substance that the iridescence of the scales of many species of fish is due.

Badly Behaved Hens.

Little Janet, from the city, had been in the country only one day, but the rights of property owners and property renters were already firmly fixed in her mind. "Mother!" she called, excitedly, the morning after their arrival. "Mother! Just come here and look! There are somebody's hens wiping their feet on our nice clean grass."—Harper's.

Opossum Pest.

The species of opossum native to New Zealand wears a very beautiful coat which does not resemble that affected by the opossum of this country. The animal which was introduced into Australia many years ago destroys fruit trees and is regarded as a pest, but opossum skins are so valuable that its value as a fur bearer outweighs any damage it may do the trees.

MEXICO OUSTS REDS

Obregon Orders U. S. Radicals to Leave.

President Takes Action After Invasion of Chamber of Deputies—To Probe Morella Affair.

Mexico City, May 17.—Frank Seaman, alleged to be an American agitator; another American whose name was not announced, and two Spaniards were ordered expelled from Mexico on the ground that they were "pernicious foreigners." This charge was preferred against them under the provisions of the Mexican constitution and was a result of the participation of the four men in the radical invasion of the chamber of deputies last week.

Demonstrations in government buildings and in churches have been forbidden in an order by President Obregon. Action by members of the Liberal-Constitutional party in the chamber of deputies to bring about the ousting of several radicals was planned for yesterday's session of the chamber, but when the body assembled it was found that there was not a quorum present. Thus what promised to be a turbulent sitting was deferred until tomorrow, as no sessions were to be held today.

The Liberal-Constitutionalists held a secret caucus yesterday at which they discussed the program to be followed. They gave particular attention to a letter they purpose to read to President Obregon asking his support in their efforts to impeach Philippe Carrillo and Antonio Diaz Soto y Gama, radical deputies charged with leading last week's invasion of the chamber by Bolsheviki. They also hope to secure the resignation of Celestino Gasca, governor of the federal district; Senor Morones, a labor leader, and Inspector of Police Reygada.

Gendarmes guarded every entrance to the chamber yesterday, and persons entering the building were searched for arms.

Socialists have planned a demonstration upon the arrival from Morella of the body of Isaac Arriaga, a radical leader who was killed during the rioting there last Thursday. Lack of funds has delayed the transfer of the body to this city, but it is believed arrangements will be made to bring it here soon.

Sweeping orders were issued by President Obregon to the federal prosecuting attorney, the supreme court and the department of the interior to investigate the Morella affair and the invasion of the chamber of deputies by radicals. Federal officers were directed to use every means at their command to ascertain the cause of the Catholic-Socialists clash at Morella, which was described in the President's order as "an act of intemperance and intolerance."
